CALCEOLARIA.

KELWAY'S MODEL .....per oz. £8 8s. ; retail packets 1/-, 1/6, 2/6, 3/6, & 5/-. 24 to the dozen.

A great speciality with us, and though proofs of the quality of the strain are hardly necessary, we append a few Press descriptions.

From the GARDENERS' MAGAZINE, May 22nd.—"HERBACEOUS CALCEOLARIAS are now in their full glory, and contribute a fine element, both to the house, stage, and the public flower show. MESSRS. KELWAY & SON, of LANGPORT, have favoured us with samples of the strain grown by them for seedling purposes, and they are certainly grand in form and of endless variety of colours."

From the GARDEN, May 22nd.—"CALCEOLARIAS—MESSRS. KELWAY—Your blooms are large and good in colour, the spotting on some of them being very bright and pretty. The clear yellow and dark kinds are perhaps the most effective."

From the JOURNAL OF HORTICULTURE, May 27th.—"A sample of Calceolaria blooms from MESSRS. KELWAY & SON, LANGPORT, SOMERSET, includes some finely shaped flowers, varied in colour, selfs, spotted and laced. Some have white or very pale yellow grounds, others gold, and still others crimson. All are pretty and the strain is a good one."

"CALCEOLARIAS: KELWAY & SON.—Yours is a strain of very large and richly coloured flowers, measuring nearly two inches across, and spotted like the pard; yellow grounds with crimson spots of various forms and character—creamy white with crimson, bronze with crimson, crimson with maroon, and many indescribable tints."—Gardeners' Chronicle.

"CALCEOLARIAS AT THE LANGPORT NURSERIES.—There are nearly 2,000 plants of Calceolarias now in bloom; the bulk of the plants are arranged in two span-roofed houses. The effect at first sight is very striking; a closer inspection only serves to show the high quality of the flowers. I did not see one indifferent flower among that vast array, and I was particularly pleased to see that there was no one colour predominant."—Gardeners' Chronicle.

"MESSRS. KELWAY & SON'S NURSERIES, LANGPORT.—The most attractive feature at these well-known Nurseries at the present moment is a magnificent display of Calceolarias, to the cultivation of which the firm has now for some years past devoted much time and attention. Altogether there are about 2,000 plants, which completely fill two spacious structures, and as they are well grown and are densely flowered, they produce a very rich and striking effect. The colours are indeed as rich and varied as they well could be. The flowers are of large size and splendid form and the plants have a most excellent habit. There is not a trace of coarseness through the collection. A purer strain and one more varied in colour and markings I have never seen. There were one or two new and distinct ground colours, particularly a beautifully clear mauve and a bright lilac. The other prevailing ground colours were crimson, white, cream, maroon, deep gold, and carmine, and all these colours were variously marbled and dotted with crimson, black, lilac, and pink."—Gardeners' Magazine.
